

THE UNIVERSITY OF HONG KONG

Code of Academic Conduct

The University of Hong Kong is committed to nurturing a positive, supportive, and respectful learning environment to underpin a productive and generative learning culture. Members of the campus community agree to act in ways that enable everyone to attain their academic and personal aspirations. Students undertake to:

1. Engage in University courses and programmes to the best of their ability while adhering to the highest standards of academic integrity and honesty.
2. Make effective use of the University's support services and resources to facilitate their learning.
3. Respect all members of the University regardless of differences such as race, ethnicity, gender, disability, marital/family status, sexual orientation, and religious belief.
4. Respond empathetically and sensitively to complex social, political and cultural issues and their legacies.
5. Hold themselves accountable for their online and real-life presence through appropriate use of communication technology.
6. Empower all members of the University to express their views in a free, civil and respectful manner, while seeking to develop their leadership skills for the benefit of the wider community.
